In addition each man was sentenced to six months on the roads and fined $2,000 upon conviction of operating a lottery, but these sentences were suspended upon the condition that they not violate laws pertaining to lottery within two years.

Lower for the defendants filed notices of appeal, and appeal bonds were fixed at $5,000.

Solicitor Mercer Blankenship told the court that Vann's testimony had made it possible to break the lottery racket. The solicitor asked the court to continue prayer for judgment in Vann's case so that he could be used by the state as a witness in the trial of 65 additional men and women who were arrested a fortnight ago in a police raid on lottery operations.

Vann and Mrs. Carl Lippard, the widow of a convicted bootlegger, were the chief state witnesses at the trial yesterday. Lippard died several weeks ago, and his widow implied that the died of causes other than natural ones.

Search Party Seeks Plane In Wild Area

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 11. — (AP) — A search party from Greenville Army Air base left Waynesville, N. C., for a wild inaccessible spot at Rattlesnake Cove on Campbell Creek 14 miles west of the town where the wreckage of an army C-78 which disappeared Jan. 31, 1944, has been located, army officials said from Waynesville this morning.

The army spokesman said the wreckage had been "pinpointed" a few hundred yards from a remote logging road. Bodies of three men believed to have been in the plane have not been located but the search party was confident of finding them, the spokesman said.

The plane disappeared while on a flight from Morris Field at Charlotte, N. C. To Nashville, Tenn. After several days of fruitless search the quest was abandoned until a hunter, identified as a Mr. Smithers, found a portion of the plane's wing.

BALANCED GENERAL DIET BEST FOR AGE

By WILLIAM A. O'BRIEN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service.

As we grow older, our thoughts turn to those things which will maintain our efficiency and if possible prolong our lives; there is little hope of life prolongation through special diet, although premature death may be prevented by avoiding dietary extremes (over weight).

The diet of aged persons should be the same as that of children, except for energy foods. A well-balanced menu containing meat, fish, eggs, cheese, milk and dairy products, vegetables and fruits and limited amounts of energy foods is indicated. To often the elderly try to maintain themselves by eating too much bread, cookies, pies cakes and foods prepared from cereal grains because they are relatively less expensive.

MEAT ISN'T BARRED

Is meat harmful for the aged? If elderly men or women have good teeth they can eat any kind of meat which does not distress them and they can eat as much meat as they did in the prime of life. The idea that meat is harmful to the aged was based upon an erroneous concept of its effect upon the kidney. It is apparent now that the warning to eat less meat may have been a scheme concocted by some miserly fellow who had to feed his mother-in-law and wanted to cut the cost.

Constipation is not necessarily an accompaniment of advancing years, as it is just as frequent in the young who have poor dietary habits. Simple constipation can be relieved by stopping cathartics, mineral oil and enemas, eating two or more dishes of cooked fruits each day, two to four servings of cooked vegetables, drinking a reasonable amount of water including a glass after arising in the morning, and taking some regular form of exercise, such as walking a certain distance each day.

Excessive weight in the aged is a handicap to getting around and simple weight reduction is indicated. Better still would be to maintain the weight 10 to 20 pounds below average after the age of 45 or 50, as life expectancy tables show the longest life in underweights.

If large quantities of food distress aged persons, smaller amount at frequent intervals should be tried. Tendency to gas formation can be eliminated by thoroughly masticating the food and avoiding gas producing foods.

Many elderly persons suffer with mild diabetes which makes them ill. Elderly persons have a tendency to be food faddists and they may lay this food or that with the hope of getting a miraculous result. There is no miraculous food and reliance should be placed on a well-balanced general diet at all ages.

Each student as a thinking, choosing, sharing, worshipping individual confronts tomorrow's world primarily alone, with his own outlook, beliefs, ambitions and rational judgments. No man can face tomorrow well who has not honestly faced himself.—Dr. Louis C. Wright, president Baldwin-Wallace college.

Until through the United Nations the world has progressed to the point where peace can be maintained as an international, cooperative action by all peace-loving people, we must maintain an army capable of carrying out the national will for peace, able to resist any enemy that threatens that peace.—Secretary of War Patterson.
