Introduction

We live in a time where everyone has strong feelings and opinions on everything that happens in the world. At the same time abortion continues to get stigmatised. While many nations have taken decisions to make abortion more accessible—whether medically or surgically, there is a sense of relief from abortion and nothing to be ashamed of. Abortion is common, and we believe that speaking up with an abortion story can help to normalise it. We will explain why you should speak up and share your abortion experience in this blog.

To create awareness about abortion

We feel, however, that discussing one's abortion experience might help other women understand the procedure. If you want to share your abortion experience, you might include few informative pointers. You

To normalise abortion based on any age

Every woman over the age of 18 has access to medical and surgical abortion. As a result, these women are allowed to perform abortions on their own or through any medical technique. Young women with an undesired pregnancy, on the other hand, are anxious. This early age abortion stories recommend that they consider an abortion with pill, and provide guidance other teenage girls to which allows them to effectively end an undesired pregnancy. It also helps them by selecting the most

Many women believe that having an abortion will change the world's perception of them. There are no concerns with abortion, and it has no bearing on your job. It has no unfavourable impact on your career.

To avoid this, we should make abortion and its procedure more normalised by sharing personal experiences and stories in the most suitable manner. If you have a sense of anxiety and are concerned about others finding about your pregnancy, we advise that you consider

While many women are puzzled by questions such as, "What am I expected to do with my unwanted pregnancy?" Is it okay if I keep this to myself? Should I talk to the baby's father about it? What if we all have different perspectives? These questions may make them nervous about how an abortion choice would affect your relationship. If a woman is not married, they can still get an abortion if they choose to end their pregnancy. To maintain such privacy we recommend to
