Belfast is such a heartfelt and beautiful film that worked for me on many levels. Great performances from all that put efforts into bringing this movie to life. My major takeaway is Kenneth Branagh's excellent direction and screenplay. He has crafted a story that is near and dear to his heart. I really love it when directors go "all in" and make their personal projects such as he did here. He directs and writes these characters and landscapes so intimately that by the end of the film, I felt extremely connected and invested to their cause. I wouldn't be surprised if this one makes a big score at the Academy Awards.

Kenneth Branagh, I now forgive you for Artemis Fowl.
